“So what sort of psychologist are you?” Speaker: Patrick Newton
Patrick Newton is one of Melbourne's most experienced and respected Forensic Psychologists. Over the past 25 years he has assessed several thousand individuals involved with various courts and has given evidence in hundreds of cases.
Patrick is an expert in the assessment and treatment of offenders. Many of his cases involve people charged with sexual and violent offending, major financial crime or major drug-related matters, but Patrick also works with many 'everyday' cases involving less serious matters.
Patrick has given evidence in some of Victoria's most high-profile cases including major terrorism cases, murders and other cases of significant public interest. His reports have been cited in major judgments and are respected for their thoroughness, fairness and clarity. Patrick will describe the specialised work of a forensic psychologist and share some of his experiences with us.
