CALL TO WORSHIP

O Christ, our Saviour, you suffered a cruel death at the hands of men, . . . and into the restored relationship with God in Heaven.

This is Sunday, the first day of the week. This is your special day, Lord Jesus. Your special day indeed. The day that you rose from the dead. The day of resurrection; the day when victory replaced despair. The day that has enlightened us; the day when death was overcome by life. The special day that cheered and uplifted the hearts of those in faith, who follow you.

As we worship you this morning here at Auburn, in this season of the resurrection . . . to be raised from our complacency in life to worship you in joy.

God of love and liberty, on this special day of ANZAC Commemoration, we bring our thanks for the peace and security that we enjoy today, which was won for us through the courage and devotion of those who served and died.
